THAT $100,000 APPROPRIATION.

The Reno Gazette is up in arms against the $100,000 appropriation for water storage. It thinks the money ought not to have been taken from the school fund.

At the special election held last Winter, the people decided by their votes that they no longer cared to see tied up in the school fund, money that might be of service in developing the industries of the State. A beginning had to be made somewhere and it was decided that the Carson river was a good point to begin. We believe that the experiment will prove of such benefit to the State that this appropriation will only be a beginning to what will follow.

Just now the Gazette does not appear to look outside of Washoe county, when it considers the bill.

Everything cannot have its beginning in Washoe, and there is no need just now of expending such a sum there, as Washoe has a large natural reservoir in Lake Tahoe, and this water coming through the Truckee has dealt out prosperity and plenty to the section through which it flows.

Now we would like to ask the Gazette if it begrudges a little prosperity and plenty to other sections of the country outside of Washoe?

The idea of attacking the motives of the Board of Commissioners before any move has been made, is ridiculous. The Board is composed of honorable men, and they well understand the great responsibilities of the trust. It is charged also that the bill is drawn in the interest of the river mills. If it will effect the result charged upon it by its detractors, all well and good. Whatever keeps the stamps of the mills in operation, helps the entire State, Washoe county included.

Straw and Alfalfa.

In Nevada each year thousands of tons of straw go to waste because farmers think it does not pay to bale. The following correspondence of the Colusa Sun is worth reading in that connection:

Noticing your comments on mixing straw with green alfalfa by the layer process, I will say that I have been disposing of my straw profitably for many years, but I find more satisfactory results from the jumbling process, which is about as easily accomplished as by layers. It is done by unloading the green alfalfa, newly mowed, so near the straw, either in the barn or stack, so that while one is unloading the alfalfa, another is pitching the straw on the new stack or pile. I have put up alfalfa in this way with complete success that was not only green but wet, adding a little more straw to the mixture. In this way, I also save the blossoms, leaves and seeds, that otherwise mostly are lost in the fields; and the straw is such a good factor in curing the hay mixed in this way, that I never wait for good weather, but cut when I am ready. I never bale any up in this way, for I suppose it would not sell readily, but for winter feeding and home use I prefer it to that put up in the ordinary way, as it cures soft in the straw, and retains all its virtues that are not absorbed in the straw. I consider straw disposed of in this way worth more than hay.—W. H. ROBERTS, VERDI, NEV.

The Deadly Cigarette.

It ought not to be necessary every day to print evidence of the bad effect of cigarette-smoking on growing youths, but the evidence from 200 doctors before the Michigan Legislature is worth heeding, and they each cited cases of boys being dwarfed, made insane, killed or rendered incapable of speech, and the professors of Michigan University also testified at length of the effect on the students who were made stupid by cigarettes.—Waterbury American.
